WEEK'S MARKET NEWS.

TRADING FAIRLY ACTIVE, SPIKE OF THE BAD WEATHER.

Eggs Higher To-Day—Fruits and Vegetables—Strap Decline—Clover Seed in Higher—Dry Goods—The Other Market News.

Indianapolis Wholesale Markets. The week has been fairly active in spite of the bad weather the last two days, Spring trade is beginning in earnest and the markets generally are in good condition.

Eggs are higher to-day, but the advance can hardly be permanent as the supply in the East is larger than some days ago. Poultry is weak.

Arrivals of domestic stock of potatoes are moderate and the market holds steady. Apples are firm and show a hardening tendency on top grades. Florida oranges are in liberal receipt. The supply in transit is light, however, and it will be difficult to maintain prices. Strawberries are in good supply.

In the vegetable market onions of choice quality are firm, and there is a little firmer feeling on choice fresh cabbages, a few extra being held in shade above quotations. Beans are steady, and butts dull and weak. Prime large and ripe tomatoes are in good demand and firm.

Clover seed is firm and higher under a good jobbing demand.

Dry goods are active with quotations unchanged.

Sirups are higher by 1c per gallon, to-day.

Fruits and Vegetables.

REFORMATORY MATTER.

SEPARATION OF THE TWO DEPARTMENTS DISCUSSED.

Dr. Rondthaler Strongly Advocates
Separation and Thinks the Question of Expense Should Not Interfere—A Contrary View.

A talk with Rev. Dr. Rondthaler develops the fact that he is heart and soul interested in the movement looking toward a separation of the Woman's reformatory and female prison. He has much attention to the State institutions of Pennsylvania before leaving in this city. He thinks that Indiana leads the list of States in the matter of reform, but needs the proposed change. He has no criticism to make of the present management, but speaks of Pennsylvania before leaving in this city. He thinks that Indiana leads the list of States in the matter of reform, but needs the proposed change. He has no criticism to make of the present management, but speaks of Pennsylvania before leaving in this city.

Judging from his personal visitations, Dr. Rondthaler has come to the conclusion that the young girls sent to the reformatory are a class of poverty and incorrigibility rather than the female criminal as a model to work upon, and by personal contact with her are led to apes her ways and follow out her ideas of life.

"Why, do you not know the reason so many of our good citizens are interested in doing away with the open patrol wagon in conveying city prisoners from the court-room to the work-house?" Dr. Rondthaler asked. "Because the street gamin, and not only that, poor neglected little soul, but our own boys were wont to wonder at, to gaze upon the hardened men executing the sentence of law, and regarding them as heroes of the first water."

Continuing, the Doctor proposed a plan similar to that followed in the State Reform School for Boys, at Plainfield, and expressed a belief that a girls' reformatory should be located in some small town, away from Indianapolis, where freedom of movement and fresh air are permitted, and all temptations for mischief are removed. He said that every boy who is sent to the reformatory is a child, and all that sort of thing, but expense should not figure where human misfortune and degradation are the chance to pull up, exists. Indiana is well off and able to pay for anything that leads her to the betterment of her people.

"I believe the separation will be most wise and beneficial, and should further advocate locating the reformatory for girls at some point in the country similar to that grand institution for boys at Plainfield. The magnificent success of the Plainfield school, under the present management of Professor Chubb, certainly is the strongest argument in favor of separation and location from a large city."

A Contrary View.
Wilson Morrow is opposed to separate buildings for the two departments, holding that the present arrangement meets the requirements of the case. He says:

"The question now raised is the necessity of incurring the large expense of providing a separate building and separate superintendent and officers for the reformatory department in contradistinction to the present. The immediate action appeal to the law which in fact refers to separate buildings, but in spirit only suggests a separation as far as practicable of the two classes. But if the position of the correspondent in The News of March 31 is tenable, then it would seem to be hardly an open question as to the immediate necessity of a separate building and superintendent. The statement referred to is: 'A woman having charge of a prison, or in any way associated in the care and management of prisoners, is unfit and disqualified for exercising like care over girls who are to be reared to good and useful womanhood and citizens of our State. It is difficult to understand what quality of mind and heart is necessary to accomplish reformation in the one case that is not essential in the other, unless it is the idea of the author of the above. To my certain knowledge many criminal women have been permanently reformed, and are now presiding over happy homes and are good citizens, while at the same time, and strange to say, under the government of the same women, very many girls, safe to say 75 per cent of the commitments, have been reformed and many of them married and have reputable families. The government of this dual institution under one head is so complete that during the late fire the superintendent put the criminal class, as well as the reformatory, upon their parole of honor and not one of them violated it, though the opportunity of doing so was ample. (This must be a mistake, inasmuch as scores of the girls escaped, though nearly all were recaptured in a day or two.) 'It requires more than brute force to thus tame and subdue these criminal natures. It requires the truly reformatory spirit, a pure Christianity, which enters largely into every department of the government and administration of these Christian women.'"

"As further proof of the orderly management and the reformatory, one of the facts that two almost merciless attacks have been made upon the government and management of the reformatory; one during the administration of the late Sarah J. Smith, and one under the present incumbent. So there were there the worst and most prejudiced criminals in the penal department were reformed by the management and sent to the reformatory. It is true that in both instances the women came through victorious, without even a blemish upon the reputation of the institution. It is true, however, that the first one contributed largely to the untimely death of Sarah J. Smith, and the last one was followed by the temporary prostration of the present superintendent. As to economy and financial skill and strict business integrity, the reformatory has not a parallel within my knowledge. The prudence of the women in having insurance to meet the loss by the late fire, which is not unusual in case of public property, the meager salaries paid to the officers, the fact that the superintendent received no pay during the seven months' leave of absence to regain health lost by overwork for the institution, and in fact the whole management shows the strictest economy, in some instances amounting to almost injury to the health of the women."

"The spirit of the law suggesting the separation of the criminal from the reformatory classes is being carried out under the same roof and under the same management, and very successfully. Then why incur the heavy expense to the State of another building and another set of officers for only fifty-three of the criminal class. The number is not as large as ten years ago, owing probably to the reformatory spirit and Christian force and power injected into the management and government by these Christian women. The present superintendent has the versatility of tact, and qualities of mind and heart so eminently possessed by her predecessor, so that she can, it need be, superintend in person the severest, corporeal punishment, administered in kindness, and go from such a scene, and uplift the tenderest and most sensitive nature of an erring girl into better life."

GRAY CLUB ACTION.

Strategic Move by the Friends of the Presidential Candidate.

The Gray Club, in a state of uproar, last night adopted resolutions endorsing Gray's candidacy for President. The meeting, it is claimed, was one of snap judgment. It is asserted by the Cleveland supporters that the meeting was called last yesterday afternoon by President Perrot, and that action was served only on the members who were known to be for Gray. It was nearly 9 o'clock when the meeting was called to order by President Perrot. J. B. Bell, deputy city attorney, introduced the resolutions, which were as follows:

Whereas, The Democrats of Indiana desire to present to the people of Indiana for President, the name of their fearless leader, Hon. Isaac P. Gray, for the nomination for President of the United States; and Whereas, That the Young Men's Gray Club of the city of Indianapolis does most heartily endorse the candidacy of Isaac P. Gray for President of the United States, and calls upon the young men of Marion county, and of the State of Indiana, to put forth every effort to secure a delegation to the national convention, which will be true and loyal to the cause of the President.

A GIANT OAK TREE.

Eight Feet in Diameter—A Monarch Sacrificed For Stable Sills.

The biggest tree in Marion county, and perhaps the biggest in the State, was cut up yesterday at the saw-mill of Nemeth & Henry, in this city. It was a giant oak, which was cut down on the Cook farm, four miles southeast of Irvington, and contained some of the most perfect wood seen in a long time. The trunk was sixty-two feet in length, eight feet in diameter at its widest point and five feet at its smallest. When measured it was found to contain 10,000 feet of lumber. It was enough to make one heart sick to think of the monarch cut down for stable sills and fence posts. The tree must have been three centuries in growing. It was sacrificed to many generations, yet was sacrificed by one.

Living Pictures in Artificial Frame.

The Portfolio Club, at its meeting this week, gave a unique entertainment under the direction of Mr. Will Forsythe, who brought the idea from the Munich Art School. A large picture-frame was hung in an open doorway and so surrounded by drapery as to appear suspended upon the wall, the interior room being darkened to present a somber background. In this darkened room and within the frame the figures, in costumes were posed, the light from a magic lantern being focused upon them. A piece of black crepe stretched over the frame added softness, and the effect was to produce the appearance of a painting. Many figures were given by various members of the club, so posed as to represent famous masterpieces from Van Dyke, Titian and others.

Last Night's Primaries.

The Democratic primaries last night were characterized by unusual interest and attendance. In many of the primaries there were warm contests, and two delegations came from precincts 7, 108, 109, 110 and 114, and three delegations from precinct 4, went to the convention from Center township. From precinct 7, in Wayne township, contesting delegations were also sent, and possibly others from out townships.

DEPARTMENT OF WOMEN AND THE HOME.

PARIS MILLINERY OF THE LATEST STYLE DESCRIBED AND ILLUSTRATED—SERGE AND CHEVIOT THE STAPLE WOOLENS—FASHION AND HOUSEHOLD MATTERS.

French Bonnet Composers Have Turned Out Some Daring Efforts for This Season—Some Pretty Effects Obtained—Newest Designs in Cheviot and Serge—How the Prices Vary—Edward Atkinson Talks About Economy—He Thinks People Can Live On One-Fourth of Their Income—About Musical Instruments—Notes of the Fashion and Matters of Interest to Women.

(Written and Illustrated for The Indianapolis News.)

The great French bonnet composers who determine the styles for elegant chapeaux have embodied their ideas for the spring and summer, and several of these creations are illustrated herewith. Chic is their quality and reberche, and pervading them is a grace peculiarly feminine. It is wonderful that such results are obtained from apparently outrageous ideas. Who but a French woman could, for example, cut straight off the front of a bonnet and fill its place with an enormous bow; build up to a four inch high crown too small for the head, and top it with straw of another color that flanges over like a pot cover; flounce the rim round with lace and produce something altogether fascinating and lovely. One can only gasp and believe. Our first drawing imperfectly sets forth the result. Note this hat, for it has several essential features. The cut-off front; the Alsatian bow; the high, narrow crown; the lace trim. In particular this hat is of fine lapped yellow straw, with rough black straw for the crown top. The bow is of black velvet, the lace white; the flowers, lilies of the valley, with, at their base, a knot of blue violets, giving an exquisite finish of color. This hat is a model for carriage and dress wear.

The mark of the inner Gallic sanctuary of fashion is clear cut upon the hat in our second drawing. This is Reboux's deft and final touch upon the fat sailor, designed especially for Trouville, and elegant watering-place wear. For street traveling and general services there will be no better model furnished by the summer. This, also, has the cut-off front, making room on the circumference for either a bow or a pair of wings. It is, however, the long-looped, horizontal, Alsatian bow that will give it its character. Our example is a fine-lapped straw of green, of that uncertain dyeing that looks in places yellow and in places gray or brown, showing the underpainting through, as an artist would say. Such a surface is far more interesting than where the color is solid. The rim is double, and the underside is black straw. The ribbon is green satin, and the wings are iridescent green. A hat of this design being worn by Delmar, at one of the Paris theaters, is of white chip, underlaid with black chip, and has smaller, in of yellow straw with a large Alsatian bow of straw-colored grenadine ribbon placed a little toward the left, and three black tips issuing from under the bow and falling over the sides of the trim.

Poetry and femininity inform the garland and fall of lace in our picture marked four. Ravine features come to mingle in one's thoughts with the balustrade of Belleville. May it never wickedly mislead as to the virtues of its wearer! Analysis of this confection shows it to be made of a black Neapolitan braid; a huge bow of black-striped grenadine ribbon; black lace and a wreath of roses that rests directly on the hair and is of a deep magenta red. In Paris this season magenta red is said to be "a very good color," which is to say it is fashionable. A perfectly stunning costume of this color worn by Jane Hading illustrates several of the latest fancies of fashion. The hat is like the one just described; the gown of red ladies' cloth is cut on princess, and has a tulle jacket, and jabot lace filling in the front to the bottom of the waist, where iridescent passementerie in deep points is shaped round for a belt. The same passementerie, with deep points upward, borders the skirt. There is to be mentioned also a new turban with low flat crown, and rolling flare, which has a wreath of roses outside the brim, against the hair, like the hat above. It is a sort of Spanish bolero.

Lay reverent eyes upon the duo in our last drawing. These diminutive rough straw-pokes represent the last note in French bonnets. The first one of them is made apparently by placing a doll's black hat over a wider rim of grayish green. Where the black and green meet is laid a wreath of ivy leaves and blackberries, mingling artistically the colors of the straw, and there are twisted into a mass in the front. Double-faced satin ribbon, yellow green on one side and gray on the other, forms the strings. The other one is of red straw, trimmed inside the front with a wreath of green oak, and outside with a twist of red ribbon, which also forms the strings.

As to strings in general the oracles early in the season were reported, as saying that streamers must be on all hats. And the word was heralded abroad, and all the first importations came over with flying pennons. Time proves now that the oracles were misinterpreted. It is a fashion too easily caught by the bowery. Nothing in fashion can be quite good for a season, what is the result of artistic skill. The rarity and exclusiveness of this skill keeps its results exclusive. Women, therefore, with small purses who wish to obtain the results of this skill in their dress must, as I have before pointed out, master for themselves the principles of art. It is not enough to appreciate; they must know why certain combinations of color and form and texture produce the results they admire. They can then direct the half-educated milliner, and out of cheap and limited materials hope to realize the artistic results.

ADA BACHE-CONE.

CHEVIOT AND SERGE.

About the Fabrics—How To Distinguish Them—Spring Novelties.

Serge and cheviot are the staple woollens in use for hard wear the year round. Cheviot is strictly a Scotch production, though made also in England and France. Among the hills which give it its name legions are made of it by the men, and petticoats by the women, to wear out in the wet heather.

Serge is peculiarly a French product, though made to some extent also in England. The two fabrics are sold from the same counter, and salesmen do not always distinguish them to customers, yet they have points of difference which shoppers would do well to understand.

Serge is woven always of twisted threads, and always has a twill.

Cheviot may have a twill or twist. Cheviot woven with a twill resembles serge, but the characteristic weave of cheviot is not a twill. It is woven more loosely, with more freedom than serge, and with a variety of pattern, with threads of varying firmness, and is a softer and more beautiful fabric. Cheviot may have many colors mingled in the weave—knots protruding here and there giving a broken surface of color, or more definite figures, and it is these that constitute a large part of the novelty cloths offered at the beginning of each season.

But serge is expected to be of one-sized threads and of a solid color. Occasionally a cheap serge imitates a novelty fabric, but in general the only variety a good serge offers is in the size of its twill, which depends on the fineness of the thread and the closeness of the weave. On these, and the twist, depends also whether the surface is rough or smooth. English serge has a larger twill than French.

A—SERGE WEAVE. B—CHEVIOT WEAVE.

A storm serge is one that is very fine and has been well shrunk. Some beautiful storm serges now in the New York market have a half-visible plaid or check of another color running through them.

American-made fabrics that bear the names of cheviot and serge differ in quality from the imported ones. Our wool is not as good as the fine Saxony wool from which the European goods are made, and our manufacturers can not import the European wool, because there is a heavy duty upon it. Since the duty was enforced our fabrics have improved to some extent, but they are still inferior, and most women prefer to buy the foreign cloth at the larger price. An American serge at $1 a yard may seem to the careless observer as good as a French one at $1.50, but fabric experts will tell you that in it you have less value for your money, and this is the practical verdict indicated by the sales.

The price of foreign or domestic serge differs in the ratio of its quality with some steadiness. But in cheviot there is a fictitious variation made by the appearance of novelty designs. You can get an excellent imported cheviot, fifty inches wide, for a dollar and a half, or less, but if it is a fashionable pattern, and at the beginning of a season, its price will be enhanced.

Cheap goods imitating high-price novelty cheviots are usually part cotton. The cotton in them may prevent the shrinking that comes to sleek all-wool, but if the cotton threads are colored, the color will fade. A great many fabrics sold for all-wool will cotton woven in them so deftly it can scarcely be discovered. If the alloy is in the white threads it does not so much matter.

Every all-wool fabric will shrink, and shrink in proportion as it is loosely woven. When possible, it is to be worn in all weathers, it should be sponged before being made up. Sponging can be ordered done at the store where the cloth is bought. The merchant will deliver it twenty-four hours later, and will charge for it 5 cents a yard extra. Cheviots can not always be sponged. Serge is on this account, as well as for its weave, the more useful of the two for all rough wear.

Merchants have many names for fancy cheviots, which is confusing to the buyer. For example, one of the novelties of this spring is called "chevron." It has zigzag lines in the weave, after the form of a chevron, and the name refers to this and not to the fabric, which is cheviot.

The rough surface wool gown holds a distinctive place in the wardrobe. It is considered the proper wear for all times and purposes of utility. Some reasons appear for this besides the fact that wool is strong and durable. The roughness suggests the natural condition of the wool and makes it seem to have been produced with slight means. The pattern, which appears to have resulted accidentally in the weaving, also bears out this suggestion of simplicity. As it seems thus to have cost little effort to produce, taste sanctions the right to use it hard, leaning on the certainty of more behind. Again, a rough surface absorbs light and so asks no attention to itself, as silk texture, for instance, does, or a printed surface, and this is in harmony with the condition of labor. Rough wool makes the ideal gown for the busy hours of day. ADA BACHE-CONE.

WHAT FIVE WOMEN MIGHT DO.

Comfortable Co-Operation on 75 Cents a Day—Their Food, Shelter, Clothing.

The general average of persons who belong to what are called the "working classes" spend one-half of their income or more for their food supply.

One need not spend more than one-quarter of a customary income, even a small one, if rightly instructed in buying and in cooking food, provided each person is furnished with suitable apparatus, and has the intelligence to use it.

There is much complaint of low wages, of insufficient nutrition and of bad conditions of living among those who can earn but low rates of wages, notably among women living in cities and occupied in sewing, in shops and in other ways. We will not here content the difficulties which this class of women are forced to meet, nor enter into any discussion as to whether or not they are justly paid for their services. We will deal with the facts as they are. We will seek to find out how to get more out of the wages that are now earned.

The investigations of the Massachusetts bureau of labor statistics show that the average earnings of women occupied in the manner named are $5 per week or $260 per year, from which we will deduct two weeks for vacation, leaving a net income of $250. Such women can not consume the quantity of food listed in the well-known life and work ration. That full quantity can be bought in Boston at the present time for $1 a week. We may therefore assume that $1 per week may be spent for somewhat less weight of food, but of a little finer quality and milk added. To this we may add $10.50, which will supply tea or coffee and a little fruit every day. This makes $22.50 in all to be spent for food during the year, and this comes to one-quarter instead of one-half of the income of $250.

Now let us consider shelter. We assume that there may be five women who can agree to live together in an apartment of five rooms; three sleeping rooms, a kitchen, and one room for parlor and dining room. There are excellent apartments to let in many parts of Boston, ones that are known as the Back Bay (steam heat included) at five times $1 a week, or at $250 a year, with the services of a janitor added. These apartments are not palatial, but they are comfortable, clean, airy and sufficient. Add to this $2 a year for each person, or $10 in all; that sum would supply kerosene oil enough to serve for lighting and for cooking the whole food supply required for five persons for one year. Thus we apply one-quarter of the income to shelter, heat, light and cooking.

If a woman will be content with plain garments of a serviceable kind, or with fancy goods of last year's fashion, she will find it not difficult to clothe herself in full comfort at the rate of $1 a week, or $52 a year. Add to this $10.50 for car fares in rainy weather, and we apply one-quarter of income to clothing and transportation.

We have covered adequate nutrition, comfortable shelter, fuel, a supply of clothing and transportation, and there still remain 75 cents of the income, or $62.50 for the sundry expenses, which need not be enumerated. Exceptions have been taken to this statement, which has been submitted before.

It is held that it is useless to expect to find groups of five single women who will co-operate in this way, sharing the work of preparing food and other matters.

With that question I do not deal.

I merely show what can be done by five women who choose to help each other to live comfortably upon an income of 75 cents a day earned by each one.

The plan may be varied with very little actual cost, provided the women agree to live together, combining to hire a cook. It is more likely that there would be ten women, earning each a dollar a day, who could and would combine, than among those who earn only twenty-five cents, since common sense has some relation to the rate of earnings. This would enable each of the ten to contribute a dollar a week to the cook's wages, who would live outside. At that rate, and often at half that rate, competent cooks can be found to do this kind of work.

In thus dealing with the subject I only intend to show what is possible. What is possible is that when people possess the imagination to live in this way, that rich itself will entitle them to earn more and to spend more.

We hear a great deal about co-operation. "Why don't people co-operate?" Well, why don't they? No one can hinder them except themselves.

EDWARD ATKINSON.

For the Music-Lover.

Music hath other "charms" than its concord of sweet sounds. Love, we know of old, lingers in its lap, legend, poetry, romance cling and abide about it, but it is also often the reason for "being" to any number of beautiful things. Such, for example, is a music stand all over richly gilt. Either end of it is a perfect harp, wonderfully true and graceful in line and crevice. Inside are these graduated partitions, crowned with floriate garlands. The whole thing stands about two feet and a half high, and is a mighty ornamental bit for either parlor or music-room.

To keep this shining stand in countenance, there are pianos with white and gold enamel, the very latest, so far as they are made only to order. But the fancy for them increases so rapidly that manufacturers say that white and gold pianos will soon be kept in stock.

Instead of a stool such instruments have a seat enough for two performers, with low arms and solid, slightly incurved back. This, too, is all over gilt like the music stand, and has a cushion of rich gold satin accurately fitting the bottom.

A narrow scarf of the same gold satin, heavily fringed and wrought with white silk, is the couch drape for the top of the white and gold piano.

A Beverage for the Sick Room.

Koumiss is a very refreshing, slightly stimulating, non-intoxicating beverage, made of milk; and it is so highly commended by physicians of eminence for its hygienic virtues in many diseases that every prudent housekeeper should know how to make it.

I have found the following to be an excellent formula for koumiss:

Dissolve about two-thirds of a half-ounce cake of compressed yeast and two table-spoonfuls of granulated sugar in a quart of warm milk. Pour that into a bottle, leaving at least an inch space at the top; cork tightly, fasten the cork securely, shake well, then set the bottle where the temperature does not exceed 60 degrees.

Let it remain at that temperature from eight to ten hours, then set it on its side in an ice chest or refrigerator, and in from six to ten hours more it will be ready for use. Bottles that have self-fastening stoppers are the most convenient to use in making koumiss; but the corks can be fastened in without much difficulty with either twine or wire.

I have made very excellent koumiss quite frequently by letting the bottles, when filled, stand from eleven to twenty-four hours on the cellar floor, where the temperature did not exceed fifty-five degrees; then laying them on their sides in the same spot and letting them remain undisturbed from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

Less sugar and yeast can be used if desired, but the proportions mentioned have always given me the most satisfactory results.

EMMA P. EVINGS.

Notes.

Gray is one of the most modish of colors. Raw silk and fancy-shot sarahs are prominently displayed.

Gray combined with pale yellow or cream white is still much favored. Full topped sleeves, fitting comfortably below the elbows, are still favorites.

The regular leg-o-mutton sleeve with modifications will prevail for costumes of all sorts.

Watered silks come in the new shades of heliotrope, yellow and black, red and black and lilac.

For summer dresses, very full sleeves with fitted cuffs will be preferred for thinner fabrics.

Some of the new parasols are quite curious in shape. The canopy of one style is undulated, the ribs rising to a sharp ridge, and the spaces between the ribs sinking into a sort of a gully. The effect is novel, but more singular than pretty.

Yokes of embroidery are fashionably united with the new long basques and round waists.

There is very little change in the shape of skirts, and the ordinary, close-fitting basques still remain.

For the ensuing summer small bonnets and large, round hats will maintain their hold upon fashionable favor.

A great deal of white will be worn, and a special fancy seems to be the use of mail blouses, with jacket or blazer of flannel or soft cloth.

Striped gingham are trimmed with embroidery and ribbon, and are made up after the Russian blouse or in plain round or surplice waist.

The large-brimmed leghorn hats, that never go wholly out of style, are to be among the most popular and most ornate of summer head-covering.

Nearly all of the spring walking-dresses have a deep band of waterproof goods on the under side of the skirts that are cut to sweep the ground. This band can be brushed and sponged each time that it has dragged the mud after it.

There is a great variety in bodices, basques, waists and coats of various lengths. Some of the new dressmakers are of cloth with sleeves of velvet or bengaline. There are extra skirts and panels also of velvet or other combination material.

There is a decided fancy just now for pretty, pretty black creole waist. They are made of cloth, silk or velvet, and are worn with skirts of black silk, camel's hair, or, indeed, any other popular black fabric. These waists are of all sorts.

Among the leading colors that run through all grades of fine millinery are the yellow tints from cream to buttercup, green from the whitish maple leaf to moss and myrtle, including the stem, willow and salad-green, and those of the lizard or blue-green dyes.

One of the new ideas in the trimming of a cloth dress is a band of plain velvet around the hem of the skirt. From this are bands of velvet of graduated length extended up the skirt and finished at the ends with square bows. The bodice is edged with ribbon, and from the collar over the front and back are graduated bands of ribbon, also with bows at the ends. The sleeves have straps of ribbon over the puffs nearly to the elbow. The cuffs are finished in the same way. At the back of the collar is a small bow with ribbon ends falling almost to the hem of the skirt. A suit of this sort has a collar and cuffs of closely curling feather trimmings.—[New York Ledger.

A Novel Place for Pamphlets.

Some of the wisest scholars delight in the collection of pamphlets. Indeed, there are pamphlets which attract little notice at the time of their publication, a generation ago that are now worth a hundred times the price then asked for them. Dr. Edward Everett Hale is one of these pamphlet collectors. He keeps his in a series of baskets suspended by rope and pulley from the beams in the ceiling of his study. Few students nowadays are fortunate enough to have a study with beams in itself.

EARL WARNER, NEW LONDON, CONN.,

"About 26 years ago I was stricken with Paralysis of the lower extremities and was unable to move. I was treated by physicians and so far relieved as to be able, with the assistance of crutches, to again attend to my business. I was troubled, however, by a persistent constipation that nothing seemed to relieve and that finally became so severe as to make my life hardly worth living. After trying many medicines I was advised by my mother to try Brandreth's Pills and I did so, beginning with four Pills as a dose. The relief they afforded me was immediate, and I continued to take them in doses of the above every night. Finally I was obliged to gradually decrease the quantity until I only took one Pill at a time, which was always taken just before retiring. I continued this for over 20 years and then was again obliged to reduce the quantity by taking only half a Pill instead of a whole one and have continued this to the present day. My health during these 26 years has been excellent. I have been free from all pains and aches; have enjoyed a good appetite and a better digestion, and altogether have been as happy as it is possible for any man to be who is obliged to shuffle through life accompanied always by two stout canes. My case is typical of what I believe to be the peculiarity of Brandreth's Pills, namely, that the dose has to be gradually reduced the longer one takes them, instead of increased, as is the case with all other medicines. I send you this testimonial entirely unsolicited and only in the hope of doing good. It may be the means of helping those who most need it."

NUMBER OF ASSOCIATIONS IN THE WORLD. In America, 1,400 in 8 different nations.

There are 350 college associations in America alone, with a membership of 22,000, which makes the largest college fraternity in the world.

The rapid growth of the work makes it impossible to keep up to date with statistics. These figures are probably below actual count.

OLD INDIANAPOLIS Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

A rightly equipped and managed association is really a feeder to the church. It is a place where the young men of the city are gathered together.

the current expense canvas, as was feared in the beginning, has helped it, and the budget is nearly the same as the first.

Statistics show that of the 400,000 young men in the State of Indiana, 437,000, or 95 per cent, do not belong to any church.

Work of the Local Organization. An old record book is a gallery of events. Its words penned by hands, some of which have long since left the life's activities, bring to the reader's mind pictures no other art can compass.

Between the dates of organization and dedication of its property the association passed through trials of all sorts, notably the depression incident to the war of the rebellion; but it never failed to hold up the banner of the faith.

This old record book tells of some things that grew out of this aggressive work. In January, 1867, the officers were actively engaged to bring about the establishment of a "reform school for juvenile offenders."

September 1, 1885, a resolution was passed declaring the old building of the association as unsuited to the purpose, namely for occupancy, and authorizing the erection of a building to cost $35,000.

NEWTON SHAFFER AS A BLACK-FACE ARTIST.

A Troupe Organized and Supported With the Proceeds From sales of Wheat-Shaffer as an All-around Man.

Newton Shaffer, familiarly known as "the widow," is a member of the Indianapolis police department, at present chief of what is called the "Sparrow Force," whose duty is to impound cattle that wander about the city in violation of an ordinance.

"I had returned home from the army after three years' service," remarked Shaffer to a News reporter last evening, "when from some unaccountable cause I became stage-struck and desired to engage in the show business."

"Biting hard tack and chewing leather in rebel prisons had not strengthened my muscles, and my voice had become hoarse, and I was unable to sing."

"One time we got into a small town where there was no hall, and we arranged to give the show in a barn. But no one came to see us, and we were high and dry, and of course, had to call on the treasurer for more money."

"At twenty-five he tried it again. There were a few beardless men, but the effect was depressing, and there was another postponement."

"At thirty-five he was a man of affairs. All things at his hands had prospered. His hair was black and wavy, and his face was a study in the art of the beard."

This popular remedy is not only maintaining but increasing the well-merited favor it has gained. This results from its accomplishment of all that is claimed for same, and its reliability has been proven by its use.

To those who know the methods of the Athlo-phoros Company it is quite unnecessary to say that this expression of "The Druggists' Record" was entirely voluntary.

KIRK'S

AMERICAN FAMILY SOAP

A LAUNDRY SOAP, PURE AND SANITARY. HEALTHFUL, AGREEABLE, CLEANSING. Cures Chapped Hands, Wounds, Burns, Etc. Removes and Prevents Dandruff.

Many a life has been lost because of the taste of cod-liver oil.

If Scott's Emulsion did nothing more than take that taste away, it would save the lives of some at least of those that put off too long the means of recovery.

It does more. It is half-digested already. It slips through the stomach as if by stealth. It goes to make strength when cod-liver oil would be a burden.

Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 239 South 5th Avenue, New York.

Your druggist keeps Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil—all druggists everywhere do.

I'm an old smoker, and have at one time or another tried all the different Smoking Tobaccos, but for a good smoke Bull Durham beats 'em all.
A leading characteristic of Bull Durham has always been the hold which it takes on old and fastidious smokers. What its excellence first secured, its uniformity has always retained, and it is, therefore, to-day as twenty-five years ago, the most popular Smoking Tobacco in the world.
